

Notes on Contributors

Lena Andersson-Skog (1959) is professor of economic history at Umeå University, Sweden.

Her two most recent publications in the field of transport history are 'Från normalspår till bredband. Svensk kommuniaktionspolitik 1850-2000', in L. Andersson-Skog and O. Krantz, Omvandlingens sekel. Perspektiv på 1900-talets samhälle (Studentlitteratur, 2002), and 'Compensating the Periphery? Regional Interest Groups and Railways in Northern Sweden 1880-1999', in L. Magnusson, J. Ottosson (eds), The State, Regulation and the Economy. A Historical Perspective (Elgar, 2001).

Lean.Andersson-Skog@ekhist.umu.se

Erik Buyst (1960) is professor of economics and economic history at the Center of Economic Studies, University of Leuven, Belgium. His research focuses on macroeconomic history, monetary history and business history. He has published in international journals, such as Journal of Economic History and Scandinavian Economic History Review. He is also co-editor of The Oxford Encyclopedia of Economic History (2003).

Erik.Buyst@econ.kuleuven.ac.be

<http://www.econ.kuleuven.ac.be/ew/academic/econhist/members/buyst.html>

Albert Carreras (1955) is professor of Economic History at the Department of Economics and Business, and research fellow of the Institut d'Estudis Territorials, Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona. His interests are in economic, industrial and business history, in port and transport history and in historical statistics. His latest book is (with Xavier Tafunell), Historia económica de la España contemporánea (Crítica, 2004).

albert.carreras@upf.edu

Ioan Cuncev (1946) is corresponding member of The Academy of Technical Sciences in Romania, senior researcher and director of a transport R & D centre in Bucharest. His activity is focused on transport and logistics research, project management, the management of research organizations. He is president of The Romanian Logistics Association, member of the COST-Technical Committee on Transport (Brussels), member of The National Transports Commission for R&D (Bucharest), vice president of The Romanian Naval League, member of The Transport Policy Assessment Research Group of The European Association for the Advancement of Social Sciences (Vienna). He elaborated and managed more than 300 research projects and papers having transport and logistics as main themes, but also with theoretical developments in related areas.

i_cuncev@fastmail.fm

Colin Divall (1957) is professor of railway studies in the Institute of Railway Studies & Transport History, a joint initiative of the National Railway Museum and the University of York in the United Kingdom. His most recent books are (as editor with W. Bond) Suburbanizing the Masses: Public Transport and Urban

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Development in Historical Perspective (Aldershot, 2003) and (with A. Scott), Making Histories in Transport Museums (London, 2001).

cd11@york.ac.uk

<http://www.york.ac.uk/depts/hist/staff/cd.htm>

Álvaro Ferreira da Silva (1955) is professor of economic history and business history in NOVA University (Lisbon), Faculdade de Economia. His research focuses on the history of urban infrastructures and business history in the 19th and 20th centuries. He is co-editor of the Economic History of Portugal (forthcoming).

asilva@fe.unl.pt

Ruud Filarski (1939) is former Head of the Department of Research and Development of the Transport Research Centre AVV of the Ministry of Transport and Public Works in the Netherlands. His specialities are the emergence of new means of transport, the competition between transport systems, and the development of the transport system in the 19th century. His last book was Kanalen van de Koning-Koopman (Canals of the Merchant King) on the development of canals, transport of goods and inland navigation in Netherlands and Belgium in the first half of the 19th century. In short time his book The rise and decline of transport systems will be published.

R.Filarski@avv.rws.minvenw.nl

Andrea Giuntini (1955) is professor of economic history in the Faculty of Economics of Modena and Reggio Emilia. His main topic of study is the history of transport. His last book: Il paese che si muove. Le ferrovie in Italia. Milano: Franco Angeli, 2002.

giuntini@unimo.it

Igor Kabashkin (1954) is Vice-Rector for Research and Development and Professor at the Transport and Telecommunications Institute of Riga (Latvia), Director of Telematics and Logistics Institute. His research interests include information technology applications, electronics and telecommunication, decision support systems, analysis and modelling of complex systems, air traffic control systems and transport telematics and logistics.

kiv@tsi.lv

Olle Krantz (1939) is professor of economic history at Umeå University, Sweden. His research is focused on economic growth and structural change, as well as transport history. He has published several books and articles. Among the most recent are 'The Transport and Communications Sector in Economic Development: Views from the Historical National Accounts', in Scandinavian Economic History Review 2000:2, and Omvandlingens sekel: perspektiv på ekonomi och samhälle i 1900-talets Sverige (A Century of Transformation: Perspectives on the Swedish Economy and Society), as ed. with Lena Andersson-Skog, Lund, 2002.

olle.krantz@ekhi.umu.se

Bernd Kreuzer (1970) is planning consultant and historian near Linz, in Austria. His research interests include architectural, planning, transport and urban history, especially the influence of the car on urban planning. He wrote about traffic censuses and the role of utopian ideas in urban transport. His most recent article is on the building of the Austrian road network in the interwar period (forthcoming) and he is now preparing a book on the history of the motorways in Austria.

bernd.kreuzer@aon.at Laura Lungescu (1970) is a junior researcher in Incertrans, Bucharest. She worked in R&D projects related to transport development, harmonization of Romanian and European legislation, transport databases and statistics.

Gosav@yahoo.com

Peter Lyth (1947) is editor of the internationally-recognised Journal of Transport History, which celebrated its 50th anniversary in 2003. He is a fellow of the International Business History Institute at the University of Nottingham, England and author, most recently, (with Philip Bagwell) of Transport in Britain: From Canal Lock to Gridlock, 1750-2000. His research interests cover the whole field of transport and tourism history, but have concentrated in particular on aviation and commercial air transport.

PeterLyth@aol.com

Michèle Merger (1947), chairwoman of the COST 340 Action (2000-2005), is senior researcher at the CNRS (Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique / Institut d'histoire Moderne et Contemporaine) in Paris, France. Her research interests include railway history, mainly in France and Italy, and transport European policies; Italian economic and business history; waterways history. Former Secretary of the French Association of Economic Historians (1955-2001), she is presently President of the International Railway History Association and a member of the French Railway Historical Society scientific board of advisers. Her latest article is: 'La grande vitesse ferroviaire, reflet des pesanteurs et des attermoiments politiques et institutionnels de l'Italie' in M. Graziano (ed.), L'Italie d'aujourd'hui. Situation et perspectives après le séisme des années quatre-vingt-dix. Paris: L'Harmattan, 2004 and as editor: Les transferts de technologie dans l'espace méditerranéen: perspectives à long terme (forthcoming).

mimerger@tin.it and Michele.Merger@ens.fr

Claudio Pavese (1944) is professor of Political Sciences at Milano University. His research field includes the history of Italian industry, particularly the electricity sector, history of networks and urban public utilities in the Milano region. His last book (with Marco Fortis and Alberto Quadrio Curzio) is: Il gruppo Edison: 1883 – 2003. Profili economici e societari, 2 vol., Bologna, 2003.

Marie-Noëlle Polino (1961) is managing director of the Association pour l'histoire des chemins de fer en France (French Railway Historical Society), which is acting as secretariat for the COST 340 Action's chair and coordinates COST 340 research in France, and deputy editor of the Revue d'histoire des che- mins de fer. Her last publication (as editor with Ralf Roth) is: The City and the Railway in Europe (Aldershot, 2003).

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

ahicf@club-internet.fr

<http://www.trains-fr.org/ahicf>

Serge Reubi (1974) is fellow researcher at the University of Neuchâtel (Switzerland). His wide range of interests includes political history, transport history and science and technology studies. His latest articles are 'Economie, diplomatie et influence patronales suisses pendant la Guerre civile espagnole (1936-1939)', Revue suisse d'histoire (2003) and 'De l'objet à l'Autre: l'enseignement de l'ethnologie à Neuchâtel, 1910-2000', 100 ans du Musée d'ethnographie de Neuchâtel (2004).

serge.reubi@unine.ch

Hans-Ulrich Schiedt (1958) is in charge of the research section of ViaStoria, Center for Transport History, an institute annexed to the University of Berne, linked to the Department for Economic, Social and Environmental History (Prof. Christian Pfister). He has recently published about transport systems and transport costs and he is co-editor of Traverse/Zeitschrift für Geschichte, revue d'histoire.

hans-ulrich.schiedt@viastoria.ch

<http://www.viastoria.ch>

Michael-W. Serruys (1972) studied Modern history at the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven and International politics at the Université catholique de Louvain. Since 2003 he is an assistant at the department of Dutch history of the Rijksuniversiteit Leiden and is currently working on a PhD entitled: Urban systems in movement. The Southern Netherlands transport policy and its influence on the trade fluxes between the Austrian Netherlands and the Dutch Republic (1713-1789).

M.W.Serruys@let.leidenuniv.nl

Lara Tavares (1974) is Teaching Assistant at the Instituto Superior de Ciências Sociais e Políticas – Universidade Técnica de Lisboa. She has a MSc in Economics obtained at Faculdade de Economia - Universidade Nova de Lisboa. Her research interests include applied microeconomics, namely in economic history. Her last publication in the economic and transport history field is: 'The value of Portuguese Railways for consumers on the eve of the First World War', co-author with Maria Eugénia Mata (submitted).

larapmt@iscsp.utl.pt

Helmuth Trischler (1958) is professor of modern history and history of technology at Munich University. At the Deutsches Museum in Munich he serves as Director of Research and Deputy Director Generale. He has run several research projects in transport history and is editing the book series Beiträge zur historischen Verkehrsforschung. In 2003 he co-edited the book: Exhibiting Transport.

H.Trischler@deutsches-museum.de

<http://www.deutsches-museum.de/forsch/institut/person.htm>